Into the third week. Mrs. Gould was still on the stand when court adjourned yesterday afternoon and it is thought that her cross-examination at the hands of DeLancey Nicoll, her husband's attorney, will not be concluded until Monday night. She will be the first witness when court convenes Monday morning. Her own attorney, Clarence J. Shearn, will then take her for re-direct examination probably Tuesday morning, but it is not thought that this will take more than half a day as Mrs. Gould did not leave very many things to be explained during her cross-examination. The Oriole and the Bee. Birds, their heads being small, are usually regarded as stupid, but an amateur naturalist has pointed out a proof that the oriole at least is very intelligent. Take the oriole's habitat in the summer, he said, and all around it you will find the decapitated bodies of bees, The oriole is fond of honey, and he has discovered somehow that the bee carries honey in a sac. Accordingly he INSPECTOT rushes down on the insect, snips off its oves its visc swallows the honey that is now laid bare. This shows intelligence on the oriole's part, but I have not yet described the thing which shows the bird's reasoning power most strongly. It is the stingless male white headed bees that the oriole slays. The stinging bee he leaves alone wisely.

The Poor Editor. The stork disappears, and we look into the cradle and behold a male child. After running the gantlet of measles, mumps and chickenpox he enters school. At the age of ten he is the terror of the neighborhood. At twelve he is an apprentice in a printing office. At eighteen he has acquired two cases of long primer type and an Army press and is the editor of a country newspaper. At twenty he is married. At thirty he is baidheaded, stoop shouldered and is the father of a large family. At thirty-five he is a corpse in a cheap pine coffin, and as 500 delinquent subscribers file past his bier for the last look they are heard to say, "He was a good fellow, but he couldn't save his money."-Lockwood (Mo.)
